We are to reproduce the life and work of Christ by life, example and witness. The church stands for a great Christian brotherhood. To bring people into the right relationship with Christ. The religious education of the young. The church's one foundation is Jesus Christ our Lord. An open discussion of local parish problems followed. Over 300 to Be Made.

This is going to be a mighty busy day for Killingly's selectmen, town clerk and register, as they will be engaged in the duty of making new voters and have a list of well over 300 names to be added to the rolls.

The registrars will be in session in order to allow the newly made voters to express their preference as to caucus registration. The new voters will have their first opportunity at the ballot boxes on Monday, Oct. 2, and they must be registered in time to be in the voting results of that day.

RENEWAL OF 14-MILL TAX

A Possibility at Coming Town Meeting—Matters Likely to Come Up.

Not a great deal of other than routine business, as far as appears from the warning, will burden the attention of the taxpayers at the annual town meeting, but it is possible that those qualified to answer may be requested to state to the selectmen and register the expenditures in certain departments, but this, too, is uncertain at the present time.

The tax rate is again becoming a subject of discussion and many are insisting that the 14-mill rate must be renewed if Killingly is to continue to decrease its big debt. A start was made this year. Among other things, Killingly may consider itself obligated to figure upon the tax recently voted laid by the country members of the state legislature. This tax for Killingly may reach $2,000, possibly much more.

Woodstock Wife Divorced From Her Drunken Husband—Decree for Deserted Brooklyn Husband—Judge Read Delays Granting Mrs. Park's Divorce—Judgment of $935.50 for Mrs. Kroll—Joseph Sheehan, 22, Has Infantile Paralysis—New Book by Miss Gertrude C. Warner.

Judge Reed heard three uncontested divorce suits and disposed of matters on the calendar at Friday's session of the superior court.

The first divorce of the day was granted Lena Perrin, of Woodstock. She charged that her husband, Stanley B. Perrin, had been habitually intemperate almost from the time of their wedding—January 15, 1915. He had conducted himself badly, Mrs. Perrin said, for the first two weeks of their married life, but thereafter he began to drink heavily and continued to do so until they separated about March 4 of this year.

Mrs. Perrin testified that she did not know that her husband was so seriously addicted to drink when she married him, but soon discovered the fact.

The incident that led to their breaking point occurred on a night early in March of this year. At that time they were boarding with Mr. and Mrs. John Spalding. On a cold and stormy night Perrin had insisted on his wife going with him to visit his mother. She was ill and felt unable to go out and she so stated. After some words her husband raised his hand to strike her, but was prevented from so doing by Mr. Spalding.

Mrs. Perrin's testimony as to Perrin's conduct relative to drinking was substantiated by Emerson Morse and Mr. and Mrs. Spalding.

Judge Reed granted the divorce on the ground of intemperance and acceded to a request that Mrs. Perrin be allowed to keep her maiden name—Lena Angell. The plaintiff was represented by Attorney Charles L. Torrey.

Decree for Deserted Husband.

Robert Cooper, Brooklyn, on the ground of desertion, was granted a divorce from Mary E. Everts, whom he married while they were residents of Brooklyn, N. Y., June 29, 1897. At that time Mr. Cooper was a railroad conductor. He testified that when he came home after work he would find his home stripped of about everything of value and his wife and two children boys—gone. The boys were kept hidden from him for months, but afterwards were returned from his wife's parents, where they had been staying. A fact that has been denied to him, and he has since cared for them. Mr. Cooper testified that his wife had refused to drink habit.

Witnesses for Mr. Cooper were Secten Oliver P. Downs, of Brooklyn, and Rev. Charles Downs, Dayville, both of whom testified that the divorce was granted on the ground of desertion. Judge Harry E. Back was counsel for Mr. Cooper.

SALESMAN DESERTED FAMILY.

But Wife's Decree Held Up Till Judge Knows Husband Has Been Notified

Judge Reed also heard the evidence in the case of Hortense E. Park, William Park, vs. William J. Park, a traveling salesman, married in Williamstown, Feb. 26, 1903. Desertion was charged and after the evidence had been laid in Judge Reed said he was satisfied, but would withhold formal granting of the divorce until such time as Mrs. Park's counsel, Attorney W. A. King, filed a registered letter receipt card showing that Mr. Park had been notified of the divorce and been sued for and that the case was to be tried. Such a card exists, but was not available at Friday's session of the court.

Mr. Park, who is now in his wife's home, was given the custody of her two children, a boy and a girl. Desertion was charged and after the evidence had been laid in Judge Reed said he was satisfied, but would withhold formal granting of the divorce until such time as Mrs. Park's counsel, Attorney W. A. King, filed a registered letter receipt card showing that Mr. Park had been notified of the divorce and been sued for and that the case was to be tried. Such a card exists, but was not available at Friday's session of the court.

Wife, Leaving Husband, Wants Cash.

There was a hearing during the morning of an application for damages by default in the case of Joseph Kroll vs. Matt. alias Maciej. Kroll, formerly of East Thompson. Mrs. Kroll is now of Webster. The Krolls, husband and wife, were the owners of a farm and the stock upon it, in the town of Thompson, in 1912. They had been separated and had been since divorced. Mrs. Kroll seeks to recover half of a bank account of $500, $100 cash kept in the house and the balance of the personal property, a total of over $1,100. After the hearing Judge Reed set the case for trial in the afternoon of the following day, Oct. 2.

Court adjourned sine die.

HAS INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Joseph Sheehan, 22, May Have Contracted Disease From His Sister in Massachusetts.

Joseph Sheehan, 22, a member of a force of hunters working in the town of Pomfret, was pronounced ill with infantile paralysis on Monday, Sept. 18, after a long illness between Dr. E. F. Perry and Dr. B. Overlook.

Sheehan visited his home in Weston Mass., last day. A few days after his return a younger sister developed infantile paralysis, it being understood that the two had been in contact in the home upon the occasion of his visit to his home.

That Sunday he played football and on the following day was in the hospital. On the following day he was in the hospital and on Thursday night was regarded as a cold, but Friday he had developed infantile paralysis. The paralysis had developed in such a degree as to affect his legs and arms, but he did not appear to be suffering much.

Health Officer C. O. Thompson of the town of Pomfret was notified of the case and Dr. W. A. King, New London, the state board of health's expert, Dr. Black ordered Sheehan to remain out of the town and to maintain the quarantine.

Sheehan is ill at the home of Henry E. Le Fort, at Abington Four Corners. The home is across the street from the school, so the development of the case has caused a flurry in the neighborhood.

Following a meeting of the town school committee Friday, the Abington school was closed.

An effort was made during the day to have Sheehan transferred to the isolation ward of the Backus hospital at Northampton, but the transfer was not made as the hospital was unable to provide the accommodation.

BY GERTRUDE C. WARNER

Daughter of Judge and Mrs. E. M. Warner Author of The House of Delight.

Among press notices of new fall books is a flattering one relative to the book, "The House of Delight," by Gertrude C. Warner, youngest daughter of Judge and Mrs. Edgar M. Warner.

The book is a story of a child's doll house and the adventures of its occupants, and is designed for girls from seven to thirteen years of age. The numbers are illustrated with photographs by John A. C. Warner, Bertha C. Child, a little cousin of the author, posed for the pictures of "Betsey and the dolls" and "The doll house." Friday, a horse owned by George B. Whittlesey, fell in Elm street. The horse refused to get to its feet and it was being assisted to when it again fell prostrate. The next effort to stand it upright was accomplished by the use of a number of men, lifting valiantly to right the animal.

President Thomas McDermott of the Little League of America, which has a real live organization here to-morrow in the Millbury team, which expects to put a crimp in the arm of the local team, was here during the past few weeks.

Circus Season Shortened.

Vincent McAvoy, who has been with an advertising car of the LeTena circus, has been here for a number of days after visiting many states and spending a number of weeks in Canada ahead of the show, which is expected to return to the state, but cut out its routings on account of infantile paralysis quarantine regulations.

New Wireless Station.

About Oct. 1 N. V. Bradshaw is to establish a new and more powerful wireless station than is in operation hereabouts on the roof of the Bradley building, Elm street. Mr. Bradshaw has secured a powerful sending apparatus, consisting of 2 one kw. transformers and four large wire sending jars. With this equipment and the necessary apparatus for transmitting and receiving, he expects to be able to keep in touch with all station points in Connecticut and many other points in the New England states. The station is to be licensed by the government.

ROUMANIAN PEASANT LIFE.

Some of the Characteristics of the People of the Last Country To Enter the War.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—A vivid picture of the Roumanian peasantry, whose country has been drawn into the European vortex of the European war after many months of vacillation, is presented in a communication to the National Geographic Society from James Howard Gore. The Society today issued a part of Mr. Gore's article as a war geography bulletin which says:

"A Roumanian village looks like this in the spring, when nature, awakened from the sleep of winter, is green and fresh. At Easter the cottages have been white-washed and the doors and window frames freshly painted in bright colors. The thatched roof has been put in order, and in its entirety the cottage calls to mind the black-eyed country girls, with their glistening strings of multi-colored beads around their necks.

"The Roumanian peasant women one meets by the roadside are the fairest among their Balkan neighbors, and this is not a flattery. The foundation of the cottage gift is most apparent under conditions best calculated for its preservation. Their dress is varied and elaborate. The foundation is a sort of shift reaching to the ankle, the upper part embroidered with colored cotton, usually red or black. Over this is a petticoat which, in its material and detail, reflects the taste and buying power of the wearer. On her head she wears a headscarf with a scarf of cotton tissue with silk stripes if her means permit, and on gala occasions she puts on a brighter kerchief, ornamented with a fringe or row of spangles. Both men and women seem partial to having their heads covered even in the house; but it is not regarded proper to eat without removing the hat.

"In no part of Europe do the peasants hold so tenaciously to their distinctive costume as in the uplands of Roumania. It is, in fact, almost in national costume, and its unifying influence was emphasized some years ago by the late Dowager Queen, widely known as Carmen Sylva, when she herself put on the native dress.

"While wheat is the great staple of this agricultural country the soil is equally adapted to corn (maize) and would be called upon for greater crops if the demand should justify it. The ease with which corn can be converted into substantial food tempts the people to give but little attention to the form in which it is prepared for consumption. Polenta, a sort of mush, can be made of corn-meal and water, and if time or energy be lacking, it will be placed on the table insufficiently cooked. Although many believe that it is the cause of the greater part of the pellagra so common in Roumania, it is difficult to persuade the peasant to exercise greater care in the preparation of polenta or substitute for it some of the many palatable dishes that can be made from corn.

"Cooking, unfortunately, is not cultivated as it should be, and the people seem to be content with simple fare and sameness that yields but little to the seasons. Gardening is looked upon as petty farming and not worthy of the attention of a man who owns a farm. The greater part of the vegetables grown are in the hands of immigrant Bulgarians. The soil and climate of the country are adapted to as wide a range as can be made from corn.

"The higher classes in Roumania—the descendants of the Boyars, the landed aristocracy and the rich citizens—use in general the French language in their daily intercourse, reserving the Roumanian tongue for those cases where it is prescribed by law—in the parliament and in the law courts. As this restriction does not affect the women, those of higher rank take but little interest in the native melodious Roumanian and would not deign to write the least important note in the language. Their proximity to Austria, and the influence of the Hohenzollern rulers have brought the Roumanian language to the Roumanians as a second competitor.

"The propaganda in behalf of the use and development of the native language is making headway, however, as evidenced by the forcible interruption by Roumanian students of a play given by the French in the city of Bucharest not long ago. The outburst resulted in rioting which kept the city in a state of siege for four days.

"One of the great economic weaknesses of Roumania arises from the fact that the rural population which works so ardently during the summer, has practically nothing to do in winter. During the idle months they spend for daily necessities all they earned when work was plentiful."
